

2007 年度

科目名 Writing III-1	対象学科・学年 文学部英米3回生	担当者 キャンディー
授業テーマ Learning to write well-structured essays via a process approach.
授業の概要と目標 In this first semester course, students will review paragraph writing and embark on planning full-scale essays. Students will get regular feedback from the teacher and peers.
評価方法 Students will be evaluated by homework, class work, attendance and a final written paper.
テキスト No textbook is assigned. The teacher will provide materials.	著者	出版社
参考書 A good electronic dictionary is recommended.	著者	出版社
授業スケジュール・内容 In this first semester class, students will review paragraph writing and will be required to write a variety of one paragraph writings. Students will review strategies for coming up with ideas for writings. This will involve brainstorming using lists, clustering and free writing activities. Students will learn how to plan simple four paragraph essays towards the middle of the semester. These essays will typically be “What are the advantages and disadvantages of [topic] essays. Strategies for writing essays with clear thesis statements and paragraphs that link together well and which are well “signposted” will be taught. Students will peer assess each other’s work using checklists. Students will also be required to make vocabulary cards and to participate in extensive reading activities too. Students are required to read 5 graded readers from the university library and to write about them in a journal.		