講義計画
Students will write a total of 5 short stories of about 500 words each. They will write 2 stories on each of 2 themes and one further story.
Students will be encouraged to plan their short stories using mind maps and paragraph plans. Planning may be done in Japanese as the aim is to freely develop creative ideas which will then stimulate and challenge the student's English at the story writing stage.
They will then write their first story and submit for correction. Students will correct their first story and reflect upon errors in their English. Next, students will write a second different story on the same theme, paying attention to improving on the errors occurring in their first story. This second story will be submitted for correction. Again students will correct their story and reflect on errors in their English. The first story of the second semester will be on the same theme as the final story of the first semester.
The primary aim of the course is to encourage students to push the limits of their English to express their own creative ideas. In so doing, students will expose weaknesses in their English which they can reflect upon and correct.
